

The Night Before Halloween...

(original artwork & poem © Pinke Spencer 2002, used with permission.)

*Twas the night before Halloween
And all through the house
All the creatures were stirring,*

Especially the mouse!

*The "in-house Trick or Treat recepticals" were hung
By the cauldron with care,
In hopes that the Great Pumpkin
Soon would be there.*

*The witches were planning
A party that night
For their goulfriends, demons, goblins
And other purveyors of fright.*

*Their black cats were busy
Matting their fur.
The spiders were spinning,
You could hear their spinnerets whir!*

*Those other familiars,
The owl and the fox,
Heard hissing and scratching
From Pandora's box.*

*The caldron was steaming
With unsavory stew:
Eye of newt, wart of toad,
A most traditional brew.*

*The front yard tombstones
With dead flowers adorned;
Skeletons hung from the trees
So all might be warned*

*That Halloween Horrors
This night rule the land,
So it's best to stay home
And hold someone's hand!*

<http://www.sickdarkntwisted.com/darkpoem.htm>

